TALK OF THE FIGHTERS

Jeffries and Corbett Preparing for Battle.

SNARLING ON BOTH SIDES

Tommy Ryan's Advent Has Not Produced Good Feeling-Both Men Cautious as to Public Claims. Corbett's Body Punch.

SAN FRANCISCO, August 1.-Prior to the advent of Tommy Ryan on the scene the opposition camps patterned them change is noticeable. Tommy's presence seems to have engendered hard feelings and the rival factions are snarling at each other and saying the meanest things they

Some one told Jeffries that Ryan would give ten thousand dollars to see him licked. Jeffries remarked that he was sure licked. Jeffries remarked that he was suite Ryan had been misquoted, ashe did not believe that any kind of a mundane hap-uening would reconcile Tommy to being separated from that amount of treasure. Jeffries' henchmen employed coarser sarcasm and aired their several opin-lons as to the extremes Tommy would go to retain his grip on a much less sum,

Of course, Tommy responded. Said he:
"I didn't say I'd give ten thousand to see him defeated. I told the truth when I said that I had no idea of joining Corhelt when I came to the coast. Now that the gauntiet has been thrown down, though, I will say that I would part with tive hundred dollars to see Jeffries defeated. In any case i'm going to be in Corbett's corner and do all in my power to get Jeffries whipped. I want to go on record, too, as saying that I am fully convinced Corbett will take the championship away from him."

Jim Corbett was riied because a whole afternoon at the Jeffries camp was devoted to a discussion of the manner in which Corbett had behaved under fire in past fights. Delaney, it was said, de-Of course, Tommy responded. Said he give him some kind of a talk that would give him some kind of a talk that would make him feel good.

These are but samples of the bitter things that are being said from day to day, and it is beginning to look as if mutual recrimination will be in order right up to the day of the contest.

Jeffries has worked with more regularity since the doctor gave him permission to resume training. Dally reports from the camp go to prove that the champion is particularly anxious to be wind perfect and improve his speed. All he does is with those particular ends in view.

JEFFRIES TALKS.

As a rule Jeffries is rather guarded when asked for an opinion respecting the fight. His usual reply is to the effect that he holds no man cheaply and will box as cautiously as possible when he faces Corbett. He talks in an entirely different strain when chatting with his cronies and makes it clear that he will Delaney, in common with Jeffiles expects to see Corbett cornered and smashed the foor before the contest has proceeded very far.

CORBETT'S GAME.

Corbett, so far as known, hasn't outlined his right to anybody and a person who watches Jim at work would be puzited to fathom his intentions. For instance part of his training—notably the lody punching and the business with the heavy bag—suggest that he intends to stand to his guns, while his shadow boxing and footwork with Berger make it appear as though Jim looks forward to an engagement where he may be called upon to employ get-awny tacties. It is more than likely, however, that Corbett is schooling himself for any kind of an emergency that arises. If he finds after the first brush at close quarters that Jeffices isn't such a fire-eater after all, he may elect to make a breast to breast fight of it and rely upon his newly-developed punching force. If, on the other hand, he receives a warning in the shape of a wandering wallop, then he may play puss in the corner with the big fellow and see how far his legs will carry him on the twenty-round journey.

Corbett appears to have great faith in his new heart punch. He receives unsolicited testimonials in regard to it every day from Sam Berger and big Yank Kenny. Both of the gentlemen referred to declare with emphasis that it is the most distressing thing of the kind they ever bumped into. "It's no use talking," said Kenny, while in a confidential mood the other day, "I've been with Fitzsimmons for years and I've sampled some of his hard ones, but I don't knew of anything I'd sooner avoid than Corbett's body punch. I guess it would be pretty hard to make the average person believe it. I will frankly say that I wouldn't have believed it myself, that it was possible for a man like Corbett to get into, his present shape and become such a punisher."

But even some of those who listened open-mouthed to Yank's tribute to the punching power of his chief remarked afterwards: "Oh. sparring partners always talk that way. They hav that there had been no disorder of any kind reported, not even stone-throwing, and that the evening had been unusually quiet. From other sources, however, it was learned that a shower of stones was hurled at a Manchester car on South Seventh Street, Richmond, near the Byrd Steet Station, early last night. No one was struck, but the car was hit by several of the missiles, which were thrown Com the darkness on the west stied of Seventh Street, beyond the depot. There was no repetition of the offense during the evening. It was also learned that some irouble was anticipated on the Seven Plines Railway, near Fair Oaks, last night, but it did not materialize. A tie was placed on the track of the Seven Plines road, but it was discovered in time to prevent necident. This was about the worst the evening yielded.

It is probably due to the vigilance of the police department in the city and of the county officers and company guards in the county interest and company guards in the county interest and company guards in the county that such a good Saturday night record was made. Extraordinary vigilance was exercised by the police, and if any further violence is attempted there is a strong probability of detection in the act. The police are on their mettle, and every man on the regular force and in the detective department is on his mettle.

MORE RETURN TO WORK.

The day was a very quiet one yesterday, Five or six of the strikers returned to work with the company, abandoning the union by their act. Among those reporting for work are William Davies, James S. Cosby, A. F. Smith, J. H. Bradley and Motorman G. W. Thompson. These are samong the best known men of the old force. Gradually, a few at a time, the men are coming back and applying for their old places. All these assert that though not actually in want, they are not willing to wait until winter comes and face its hardships without means. It is expected that more of the strikers will apply for places now every day.

The men are still meeting as usual at Sanger Hall, but the attendance is gradually decreasing, and the meetings lack the interest manifested in the earlier days of the strike. Some contributions are coming in almost every day and there is talk of benefits of various kinds to money for the men.

It is expected that the Executive Board of the organization will to-morrow im-pose fines on the men who have aban-doned the union and resumed work with

DEMONSTRATION OF SYMPATHY. Preparations are being made for the demonstration of sympathy with the strikers, in the nature of a public meeting at Corooran Hall, on Church Hill, on Tuesday night. President John M. Ryall, of the Trades and Labor Council, is expected to preside, and among the speakers expected to participate are Mr. Rezin Orr, Mr. C. M. Wallace, Jr., Mr. Dodge, of the Brotherhoed of Locomotive Firemen, and Mr. Creamer, Colonel Spotswood, and possibly others. The addresses will be along the same lines as those at the Academy of Music and in

The national officer was sent here in his official capacity to endeavor to effect an agreement and an amicable adjustment of some kind to the men, and after familiarizing himself with the local situation and the nature of the demands made, he sought to adjust the differences. Falling in this, he deported his failure to the local organization, which thereupon determined to order a strike. The men knew, says Mr. Orr, what to expect in the way of support before they went out. Now that the strike is on, only the men in the local association have the power to all it off.
